Dear Mrs Burnett,

It was with very great sadness that I learnt of the death of your husband from Michael Harper. I did not know him as well as I should have liked and I was frustrated that on my several visits to South Africa it was not possible to pay a visit to Grahamstown to help remedy that fact, but I certainly greatly appreciated the help and support he gave me in my work and his readiness - which must have taken some courage - to identify with what I had to say in my book Revolution or Reconciliation? He seemed a great man of God and I suppose it must be some comfort to you to know that he has gone to a much better place than this increasingly crazy world, but I am sure you must miss him greatly. In my very small way I shall to.

Yours in Sympathy,
